Bill Halunen is NO Rick LaFond

The opinions in the comment side of Fixcarver.com represent the unedited opinions of the commenter. Respecting the opinions of others does not mean we agree. We, like the poster, believe the performance of the DPW in the last snowstorm could have been better but let's not throw the baby out with the bath water. DPW superintendent Bill Halunen appeared before Selectmen to request policy guidance. He gave a reasonable explanation for the road conditions. DPW policy correctly considers public safety as well as cost in the application of chemicals to the road surface. Neither Mr. Halunen nor the taxpayers of Carver have unlimited budgets. Difficult weather conditions cannot always be accurately predicted and it appears that the DPW got caught in an unusual set of circumstances that resulted in snow packed roads for longer than anyone would have liked. The DPW need not fix a policy that is not broken and selectmen correctly supported his decision making process. Isolated problems are tolerable in any department and do not tarnish a good persons record. When problems reoccur and change is resisted the confidence of the people is destroyed. This is clearly not the case here. Bill Halunen is no Rick LaFond.
