Why does the Governor and the Schools feel they can intrude into our personal lives? As Parents, aren't we suppose to teach respect for others at home? It's not the job of our Government to intrude into our families. That is socialism!

Takes a Stand Against Bullying

"No Name Calling Day"
January 25, 2012

In keeping with the Governor's commitment to have a safe learning environment, Governor Deval Patrick has designated Wednesday, January 25, as "No Name Calling Day" in Massachusetts. A provision of the anti-bullying legislation, supported by the legislature and signed by Governor Patrick in May of 2010, "No Name Calling Day" will be recognized in classrooms across the Commonwealth as students pledge to take a stand against bullying. On that day, students are encouraged to wear something black, as a sign of their commitment to "black out bullying" in schools.
